The Sunday Masses.

The hours are 6:00, 7:00, 8:00, and 9:00. The Sunday breakfast is at 8:00. "Be on time" is the watchword. There are no sermons at the Masses tomorrow, so if you follow the custom of the home parish of coming to Mass in the middle of the sermon, you will find yourself obliged to return for a later Mass.

The Masses will be said in the church. In spite of the scaffolding erected for the renovation of the paintings, there will be sufficient room for the accommodation of everyone - and we want to get you used to coming to church.

Confession.

While confessions are heard in four confessionals during all the Sunday Masses, the facilities possible in this way are quite limited when you consider that a thousand or two may take the notion to go to confession on Sunday morning. Be beforehand.

Go to confession tonight.

Confessions are heard after supper every evening (until 7:00) in three chapels - Dillon, Sorin, and the Basement of the church.

Be prepared for daily Communion during the Mission. You will feel out of place if you see the rest of the church approaching the Holy Table while you kneel there with mortal sin on your soul. And you will feel worse than out of place if you happen to be the next one to die and the Divine Judge asks you what kind of a Mission you made. Get your sins off your soul early; feel comfortable during the sermon on Death.

Free Advice to Sophomores.

Notre Dame struggled along through ninety hard years of existence before you came to rest your bones beneath the golden dome - and will probably go on through another ninety after you are gone and forgotten. This reminder is given so that you will not take too seriously your job of knocking down the ears of the freshmen. There are other educational agencies on the campus besides the sophomore class.

Take a walk around the lake or down the river to find something to write home about. The sophomore whose interest lies in dates and dancing finds a hard time writing home about anything but money, and parents who were kept posted on the minutiae of college life by freshmen who were thrilled to death by the first taste of college life look in vain for the mail man when the pride of their hearts gets sophomoritis.

Learn from last year's experience that if you want to pass you must start work the first day; that if you want to gain solid weight you must take exercise; and that if you want to get the real value of a Catholic education you must receive Holy Communion every day.

No Advice to Seniors?

Quien sabo? Let them show their teeth first. Most advice given to seniors before Washington's Birthday is wasted; after their first appearance in cap and gown they begin to realize - when it is almost too late - that they have a thousand and one things to learn before they are ready to go out into the world.

No Charge Accounts.

The discontinuance of charge accounts at the Book Store is largely a spiritual measure: it protects the parents of chisellers against the action of their sons in buying on tick and selling for cash such items as $15 fountain pens.
