Let Mr. Lunn Help You!

You meet a man in a club car. He flicks ashes. You flick right after him. You begin to talk together.

"Oh, so you're a Roman Catholic!" says he. "How can you swallow all that stuff about hell?" "You Catholics seem a bit antiquated and medieval in your stand on birth control and sterilization." "How can anyone know that there's a personal God?" "Tell me, just why are Catholics so dead set against the Communists?"

And so on, and so on.

How creditably could you conduct yourself in such a meeting? Like those Spaniards in the Alcazar, most Catholics will hold to their Faith in hunger and shell fire, even through the most frightful of deaths. But they are slow to give their time and brains to the spread and defense of that Faith.

Mr. Arnold Lunn, who is now lecturing at the University, has had a world of experience in private and public discussions in the field of apologetics. You are familiar with several of his excellent books.

He is organizing a Monday Night Group, to be composed of all Notre Dame students interested in Catholic questions of the day. Meetings will be informal. There will be no marks and no compulsion—except that exerted by your own interest.

Mr. Lunn will introduce you into the methods followed by the Catholic Evidence Guild of London in their public work in Hyde Park.

If you are interested, meet him next Monday night at 8 o'clock in the smoking room in the basement of the Law Building.

And Use Your Free Library!

To supplement the large University Library, you have more than 200 hand-picked modern Catholic books at your disposal in the prefect of religion's office, 117 Dillon Hall.

Such authors as Arnold Lunn, G. K. Chesterton, Hilaire Belloc, Christopher Dawson, Jacques Maritain, Paul Claudel, Owen Francis Dudley, and Monsignor Fulton Sheen are represented in the collection.

Drop in any night of the year, from 8 to 10, and make your selection.

Be more than a mere bluffer on the important Catholic questions of the day!

Who Is She?

This is the birthday of a beautiful young girl who died at 24. She was not a singer nor actress nor radio entertainer. She "buried" herself at 16 in a convent. Her life there glowed with a personal love of her God. Since her death she has become the best-known girl of the century. Who is she?

Visit The Pamphlet Racks!

Two well-stocked pamphlet racks—one in Sorin, the other in Dillon—are at your service. Make use of them.
